Annual Skating Party Enjoyed By Citizens

The annual skating party held Friday night was thoroughly enjoyed by the participants, and created a great deal of fun in as much as many of the skaters had not been indulging in the pastime for a period of years. One skater claiming that it was the first time in twenty years that he had donned skates. The fact that one pair of skates had been idle for sometime was made evident when difficulty was encountered while putting on the skates. An investigation disclosed a mouse's nest nicely tucked away in the toe.

It was a grand night and refreshments later served at the home of Mrs. C. McLean, brought the pleasant evening to a perfect close. Mrs. E. Latiff and R. A. Maxwell, with tea cup and palm reading respectively, led the guests into the realm of mystery, while peering into the future. Unfortunately J. H. Bastin received a severe injury to his head while participating in a game of crack-the-whip. Otherwise the evening passed with few complaints, but Saturday a few groans could be heard from nuzzles that had been dormant for many years.

In Canada the extent to which potatoes are used for the manufacture of starch and flour depends on prices for table potatoes. Two factories in New Brunswick are capable of handling a total of 1,750,000 bushels to the end of June.

Handicraft Exhibit Planned For This Fall

The Women's Institute is planning an Exhibition of Handicraft, with prizes, to be held next fall, probably about October 15th. Two prizes will be offered in each class—a first prize of $1.00 and a second prize of 50 cents. The classes will include quilts, rugs, knitted sweaters, fine crochet, embroidery, and individual collections of all kinds of handicraft, including any articles made with in the past year. The competitions will be open to women from Champion community only; the judges will be chosen from outside the community. All exhibits must have been made within a year.

The Institute regrets that at the present time they cannot see their way clear to offer more substantial money prizes, but should the interest warrant it, an increase might be made another year. At present the idea is to gather together for the purpose of display samples of the best work done in any kind of handicraft in this community. As the winter season is the favorite time for quilt-making and rug-making, we hope the women will keep the exhibition in mind right now. For further information see Mrs. Voisey, or Mrs. R. I. Baker.

For the world as a whole, milk is probably the main source of farming income. In the United Kingdom, states the Imperial Economic Committee, its value exceeds that of any other farm commodity; in the United States, and even in Canada in certain years, the value of the wheat crop is less than that of dairy production.

Very difficult roads were encountered, the return trip of thirty-five miles taking six hours. L. Price burned out the clutch in our bucking snow drifts and was forced to abandon it, the players all returning in the car driven by Mr. Campbell. The party also were extremely cold and G. Hargreaves suffered from bitten feet.

Woman's Institute Have Busy Session

The February meeting of the Champion Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Carlson and Miss Margaret Carlson on Tuesday, the eighth, at 3 p.m. The president, Mrs. Voisey, occupied the chair. Mrs. Alexander announced that a new box of books from the Lady Tweedsmuir Library had just been received, that they looked very attractive and were available for reading to anyone in the community. An Exhibition of Handicraft, to take place in the fall, was planned. Prizes would be offered, and the necessity for early advertising was stressed. Plans were made for an evening bridge, to be held at the home of Mrs. Alexander, on Tuesday, February 15th, and for a local talent concert to take place early in March.

At the close of the business meeting J. H. Bastin gave a very interesting paper on "A Centenary of Tea." He took his audience back to the days when tea cost $30.00 to $50.00 a pound, and was a rare drink in the western hemisphere. Then approaching nearer our own times, he mentioned that about a hundred years ago in 1830, the first consignment of 500 pounds of tea reached London and was sold by auction in "Mincing Lane," bringing from $3.00 to $7.00 per pound. Thus began the great tea industry of the British Empire, which now has an annual production of 650,000,000 pounds of tea, representing a capital of $385,000,000.00 invested in tea plantations, and giving employment to thousands of planters, factory workers, pluckers, tea chest makers, agents, brokers, merchants, tasters, and so on.

The Ceylon Tea Bureau, faced with depression conditions, has been carrying on an intensive campaign of advertising and has been assisting their wholesalers and retailers all they can. Their efforts tend to improve the quality of the tea, and they stress the fact that Good Tea is "Good for You."

The various kinds of teas from Ceylon, India and China were discussed, and by request, Mr. Bastin described in some detail the public auctions of tea in London, and the duties of the tea tasters.

Mrs. Voisey expressed the gratitude of the Institute for the trouble Mr. Bastin had taken in preparing this paper, and assured him of their interest in the subject.

At the conclusion of the meeting, lunch was served by Mrs. Farris and Mrs. Baker.

Canadian dollars for imported goods were distributed among 75 "foreign" countries in the six months ended September, 1937, apart altogether from the money used for imports from the British Empire comprising 37 "countries," according to a tabulation in government statistics.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. C. L. STRANGE,

Searle Grain Company, Limited

"Many farmers are cleaning their wheat before taking it to the elevators because they find they are getting too much chaffage for weeds."

The above notation appeared in a recent issue of the "Settler Independent", Alberta.

From the point of view of farmers, this seems to me, is important news, for the writer has put his finger on one of the most serious forms of loss from which farmers in Western Canada are suffering, and which loss, moreover, can be reduced by all, just as it is being reduced by some at least in the Settler district.

When many weed seeds are present in grain the farmer loses by:— The expense of hauling weeds to the elevator and the cost of freight from the country point to Fort William, then the loss of the feeding value of the weed seeds, which he hardly a single variety that does not contain at least some feeding value, especially when fed in mixtures with other grains.

Cleaning out the weed seeds then, either through the separator at threshing time, or by a cleaning machine on the farm before the grain is hauled to the elevator, certainly will bring to farmers increased revenue.

From 1925 to 1931, apple tree planting in Canada declined but have been increasing ever since. The apple crop of 1937 was one of the largest on record, being 14 per cent higher than the five year average 1931-35. The increase was general in all producing provinces.

New Sea Lord

Sir Roger Backhouse To Be Chief Of Naval Staff

The British admiralty announced appointment of Admiral Sir Roger Backhouse to be chief of the admiralty and chief of the naval staff. The appointment carries with it the post of first sea lord. Sir Roger, who has been commander-in-chief of the home fleet, succeeds Admiral of the Fleet Lord Chatfield, who has been first sea lord since 1933. Taking over the home fleet in 1933, Sir Roger, who is 59, has had an eventful 25 years in command. No matter had he isolated his flag in the battleship Nelson than a large part of the fleet was ordered to the Mediterranean to watch Great Britain's sea communications as Italian transports poured through the Suez canal on their way to Ethiopia.

A year later the Spanish civil war led to further calls on Sir Roger's ships. The bulk of his fleet, however, was present at the coronation review at Spithead last May. Now, Sir Roger was senior flag officer in command.

"And where is this Punder you speak of so highly?" inquired the earl.

"I am Punder."

"How do you do?" asked the earl.

"Will you sit down?"

"I'll stand."

"As you wish, Mr. Punder; but please don't point your silk hat at me like that. Reminds me of a cannon."

Punder puffed no need to this request.

"What's all this about him taking the castle?" he demanded, raising Ernest with a bovine glare.

"May I present Mr. Ernest Bingley?" said the earl. "One of the American lot."

"I might have guessed it," he said. "A Yankee. They push in everywhere."

"Like Punder?" murmured the earl.

Punder chose to ignore this. He addressed Ernest—

"Let me tell you that whoever you are, you can't be under Punder's nose."

"My dear Mr. Punder," said the earl, "let me speak for Mr. Bingley and say that your nose was not even on the distant horizon when he and I came to town."

"Is that London soldier of yours a fool or a knave or both?" Punder demanded.

"A knave," returned the earl, and he said it with warmth. "I advise you, Mr. Punder, not to make such suggestions. They are slanderous and probably actionable."

"I was just asking," said Punder. "I had a lot of a chat with him and he said he'd write you."

"And so he did," said the earl. Then struck by a disturbing thought, he said, "Dear me! I remember now he will write in long-hand—his of the old school, you know—and I want a note of the name."

"What about, then, what about it?" asked Punder.

"What about the castle?"

"No! No! No! I don't want it from stem to stern, if you wish to Mr. Punder. I've seen enough of it to know I want it," said Punder.

"The afraid you are too late, Mr. Punder," said the earl. "This gentleman got here first. Auditors for tomorrow, you know."

"Meaning, in round numbers, 'Pirated first, served,'" said the earl.

"Now look here," said Punder. "That Scotch lawyer of yours gave me to understand that I could rent the place, with an option to buy, and I can't see that if I don't take a lumping good offer, you'd sell like a hot wheel."

"It is not my intention," said the earl, steadily, "to let Bingley Castle."

like a shot or anything else. It remains in the family."

"That's what you think," said Punder.

"Correct me if I'm wrong by all means," said the earl.

"What Punder wants, Punder gets," asserted the owner of that name.

"How nice for Punder," said the earl.

"And I want this."

Punder seized a big hand in a gesture which included the castle and its grounds.

"Nothing doing," said the earl.

"I wish you wouldn't keep saying that," said the earl.

"And when I have it," went on Punder, "I'll just modernize it up a bit. Cut down a few trees. Smarten the place up. When I've spent a couple of thousand odd on paint and plumbing, you don't know the old place."

"Shouldn't wait to," said the earl. Ernest glanced at Lady Bingley and saw, in her face, a look of grave concern.

"How much?"

Punder pointed his cannon hat at Ernest and discharged the question point blank at him.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said Ernest. "I'm only the tenant."

"You're an American, aren't you?" said Punder in third-degree tones.

"Then you know what 'how much' means."

"I do," said Ernest, slyly.

"Well, then, how much?"

"In this game?" asked the earl.

"How much for what?" asked Ernest.

"Your option or whatever you have on this place," said Punder.

When Ernest was slow in replying, Punder rushed on—

"Gouge me," he said. "I know you Yanks. If I'd known one of you was after this place I wouldn't have stopped off at Bristol yesterday to buy a cheese plant there. You got here first. All right. That's business. Gouge me."

He moved his chest close to Ernest as if the gouging were to be of a physical nature.

"But I don't want to gouge you, Mr. Punder," said Ernest.

"Oh, no?" snorted Punder. "And you a Yank! Half Innocent as a lamb you are."

"Two lambs," put in the earl.

"I see through you," Punder said, fixing Ernest with no searching an eye just Ernest felt as if he were being X-rayed. He began to perspire. He did not want to be seen through. He wanted for the words which would expose him as a sham.

"You and your cute little game," snorted on Punder. "You knew Punder had his eye on this castle. It's common talk in the City. So you sneaked down here, tied it up, and now you think you have me by the ears."

"Mr. Punder," said Ernest, "you are mistaken. I haven't got you by the ears. I don't want to have you by the ears. I did not sneak down here. I'd no idea you were interested in the castle. In fact, until a minute ago, I never heard of you in my life."

"This imputation of anonymity caused Punder to purple and swell in an alarming way."

"Never heard of Punder, hey?" he belated. "Well, you've heard of him now and you'll hear of him again."

"Really, now, Mr. Punder," said the earl, soothingly, "you must not excite yourself. You might burst. I should care to have that happen. Not in my breakfast room, anyhow."

"Nobody's going to lambaste Punder," thundered the pickle magnate.

"Of course, not," said the earl, as if he were a wise speaking to a child. "The dear Bambocoe Punder? I should think not."

"What do you call it, then," demanded Punder, "telling a Yank do me out of my castle?"

"Is it your contention that you have a legal right to the place?" asked the earl.

"Can't me, perhaps," grudgingly admitted Punder.

"Well, then, you must take your medicine like a little man."

"That's what you think," said Punder.

"In a few words a possible, 'Yes,'" said the earl.

"That's what you—"

The earl held up his hand.

"Please, Mr. Punder," he said, "I'm sorry you had the trip down here for nothing. So, as your time must be valuable—"

"Guinea a minute."

"Really? At least one pound ten I'd have said. That you know, of course."

"I know what I want, too," said Punder. "And I know how to get it, too."

"In this case," said the earl, "I don't see."

"You got a family motto?"

"We have, Mr. Punder. It is 'In Omnia Paratus'—meaning the Bingleys are ready for anything."

"I don't see," said Punder. "It is not Greek, it's plain English and it is. Nothing Stops Punder."

"Pity," said the earl.

"May I say something?" said Ernest.

"I've been thinking about the situation," said Ernest. "I don't want to be unfair to you, sir, or to anybody. Perhaps, since I rented the castle through what might be called a misunderstanding, I should step aside and let you have it."

"You might say," said Punder. "It is a ramp. Hah! Another of those American half-ups. Well, how much?"

He whipped out a check-book as if he were drawing a pistol.

A faint smile escaped from Lady Bingley. It might have been a moue.

Ernest's eyes travelled to her troubled face.

"Nothing," he said.

"I mean I'm going to keep the castle."

"Oh, yes?"

Punder pushed his big face close to Ernest's.

Ernest met his eyes.

"Oh, Yank! I wouldn't. And then he lost his temper. Never in his life had he lost it before; so now, while he was about it, he made a good job of it."

"And since it is my castle, you get the hell out of it, you big stiff," he said.

"Easy, Ernest," said the earl.

"Easy, my eye," cried Ernest. "Crump!"

"You sir!" said the hovering Crump.

Leaves Money To Village

Little Community In England Receives Fortune From Shopkeeper

Miss Annie Shaw is dead. London may not know, nor will Canada care very much. But the little village of Weston-on-Trent has been surprised out of its rural complacency to find that the village storekeeper left the community £16,000 ($80,000).

£16,000 in this village is a lot of money, enough to build a village hall, put a pool of balls in the parish church, improve the village green and still have some "for charitable purposes beneficial to the inhabitants as a community."

Miss Shaw wished for those particular things. She was a one-knee Miss Shaw; had that much money. She retired several years ago, but her shop only closed its doors, she lived on in a sitting room behind.

Considered A Necessity

Owning A Motor Car Is No Longer Sign Of Wealth

At one time the ownership of an automobile was a sign of wealth. That time is not very long ago, but it has departed definitely now. A survey of the United States and Canada has shown that automobile ownership among families with incomes of less than $30 a week is increasing at the rate of 1,000,000 annually. It is expected that by 1940 two-thirds of the motor cars in the two countries, or more than 15,000,000 of them, will be owned by persons in the less-than-$30 class. Edmonton Journal.

CANADIAN GOODS SHOULD BE OUR FIRST CHOICE

"When the Canadian housewife buys a pair of shoes for junior, where does the money go?" the National Producers in Canada Association asks in a recent news release. It answers its own question in this way: "The money paid for the pair of shoes reimburses the farmer who supplied the hides for the leather, the employees in the shoe factory where they were purchased, the employees who make the carton, the printer who set the identifying print on the box, the employees who made the ink used by the printer and right down to the lumberman who cut the wood from which the box was made. In reality, bearing in mind the inter-related industries, the price of that pair of shoes is eventually spread all over the country. Similarly the same process follows when the housewife buys something which is produced outside of Canada which explains in part why approximately one out of every ten are on relief in Canada today."

Tabulating Canada's trade is a man sized job from whatever angle it is regarded judging by the official statistics issued in the name of the Canadian government. For instance alone 308 pages are required in the last issue giving the quarterly report of the Trade of Canada; and these imports range all the way from toothbrushes to works of art on which Canadians spend money abroad in the respective of whether or not they are produced in this country, and in the production of which men and women are employed.

By their purchases of important foods Canadians are generous contributors to the pay envelopes of workers in other countries judging by a survey of imports in 1937 included in statistics showing the trade of Canada. At the same time as they send money abroad they contribute through taxes to the support of their own unemployed on the relief of which over $800,000,000 had been spent since 1930, official records show.

WARN DRIVERS OF DEADLY FUMES

Grim warning of the dangers of the deadly carbon monoxide was given in a southern Alberta town recently when the lives of three young boys were snuffed out, without the victims having the slightest chance of recovery. Playing in a garage, the boys wanted to hear the radio in the motor car. They started the engine, resulting in the building being charged with carbon monoxide, and all succumbed.

The extreme danger of carbon monoxide has been emphasized over and over again by officials of the Alberta Motor Association. Each year this poison takes its toll in this and other provinces.

Accidents continue to grow, making it all the more necessary for drivers to give close attention to the need of having their cars in proper operating condition.

In cold weather car engines should not be kept running unless the garage doors are open and there should be a car window or more kept open so that the fumes of any deadly fumes will be greatly minimized.

Only by measures designed to warn the public of the danger of carbon monoxide will this annual toll in Alberta be substantially reduced.

CANADIAN FISH CUTLETS

Take two cups of any desired kind of Canadian fish or shellfish and add salt and pepper to suit the taste and 2 tablespoons onion juice. 2 teaspoons lemon juice and, if desired, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce. Add to the fish and seasonings 2 cups of thick white sauce which has been thoroughly chilled. Form the mixture into cutlets and roll in finely sifted bread crumbs (It is well to chill the cutlets again after they have been shaped). Bake the cutlets in a greased pan in a moderate oven or fry in deep fat, having the fat sufficiently hot to brown an inch cube of bread in forty seconds. The white sauce may be made by melting a quarter of a cup of butter, or using cooking oil, blending in a half cup of flour, adding two cups of warm milk and cooking the mixture until it is thick and smooth, stirring it constantly. A tomato sauce goes well with the cutlets.

Total milk production in Canada has shown a steady increase for the past nine years. During the five-year period 1932-36, milk production increased from approximately 15,900,000,000 lb. in 1932 to 16,700,000,000 lb. in 1936, and a further advance of approximately 200 million lb. is indicated for 1937.

Factory cheese in Canada during 1937 made further advances and reached the highest level since 1928. Exports increased over 1936, and as prices have also been considerably higher, prospects for 1938 are encouraging, states the Agricultural Situation and Outlook for 1938. Cheese prices in 1938 will be usual depend upon the United Kingdom market.
